

The Sustainable World SourceBook is a “User’s Manual for the Concerned Citizen”—a broad overview of the most important issues and aspects of sustainability, from the global to the personal, with an emphasis on solutions and actions to take.

It is intentionally a concise publication (100 pages) and visually rich, so that it is an attractive and easy read by a broad demographic, not just those already into sustainability. It fills a unique and important niche—taking the plethora of information and synthesizing it into a very accessible volume

Sustainable World Sourcebook

Lexington eco-activist, Jim Embry, director of Sustainable Communities Network and as a member of the Sustainable World Coalition, was part of the collaborative team of writers for this publication which also features several of his photographs. Scenes from community gardens in Lexington(p.87) and Detroit(p.63), Muir Woods in CA(p.19), and Terra Madre in Italy(p.46) are among his photographs selected for this book. His written contributions which highlight his work in Lexington’s Eastend neighborhood include sections of chapters 6 & 7, boxed text on p.37 & an inside back cover quote.

The purpose of the Sustainable World Coalition is to help create a human presence on the Earth that is environmentally sustainable, spiritually fulfilling and socially just which restores balance and sustainability across the Earth. We, members of Sustainable World Coalition, feel blessed and honored to make this small contribution to our most challenging responsibility and sacred duty!
